Living and Learning LEAP is for first year students living on campus. Students will live together on a single floor in the Residence Halls and take LEAP classes in the LEAP House, which is conveniently located next door to the Peterson Heritage Center. Qualified Living and Learning LEAP students can also choose to enroll in Writing 2011- Intermediate Writing for LEAP students, held in the Peterson Heritage Center.

Students who choose Living and Learning LEAP will all live together on a single floor, where a Peer Advisor will also live, and will take one of two LEAP sections, both on Tuesdays and Thursdays, LEAP 1101-014 at 9:10am -10:30am and LEAP 1101-015 at 10:45am-12:05pm. If you want to take the Intermediate Writing for LEAP students, there is a Writing 2011 class at 9:10am at Peterson Heritage Center, sign up for the LEAP 1101-015 Living and Learning LEAP class.

There are many advantages to Living and Learning LEAP:

- There is no commute, so you don’t have to get up as early to make it to your first class!
- You will get to know other LEAP students who are also living on campus, thus building a community of friends where you live.
- Many of your classmates in LEAP will also be in Writing 2011- Intermediate Writing for LEAP students, held at Peterson Heritage Center.
- The LEAP House is cool. It feels more like a home than a classroom, and you can study there in the afternoons and evenings.

Living and Learning LEAP, like other LEAP classes, satisfies three general education requirements: one humanities, one social science, and the only university diversity requirement. As in all LEAP classes, you’ll study and practice community. The classes are small, between 15 and 24 students, and instruction is by discussion and small group work. The class is designed to teach you the general academic skills you’ll need to be successful at the University (close reading, critical thinking, argumentative writing, research skills), as well as to introduce you to the fundamental questions governing research in humanities and social sciences.

The LEAP Program offers social and service opportunities, too. It gets you off to a great start in college!

For more information on the LEAP Program, visit: www.leap.utah.edu.